Adele Griffin. "Since the divorce from Dad, Mom hadn't gone on more than a loose handful of dates, but she'd made up this rule that every potential candidate had to do kitchen time so that Alex and I could give her ...our starter opinion." Translation: ten minutes of eyeballing Mr. Maybe as he nursed his club soda or can of beer while Mom dashed around, getting ready. Strange to think how Mom was always in a rush those days. Especially for Date Nights. Peeling off her work clothes and hopping in the shower, then reemerging in her wrong-for-all-seasons navy shirtdress. Leaving us to wander w/ Book Details. Her second novel, If We Ever Meet Again, is loosely based on her own study abroad experiences. Besides reading and writing, she also enjoys food, politics, and fashion. Related authors. "You really want to walk down the aisle with an old queen like me? Or is this another cockeyed scheme to pass me off as your bastard of a father?" "Don't flatter yourself. Sorry to say, but I don't think you could pull it off. Not nearly enough wrinkles to play my dad." "On the contrary, it was a compliment." Other author's books: Replay. P.S. From Paris (US Edition).
