"Remember Why You Play: Faith, Football, and a Season to Believe," by David Thomas (Tyndale House Publishers). At Hogan's urging, more than three hundred Faith parents and students formed a 40-yard-long spirit line, cheering the Tornadoes onto the field for the first time in the school's history. Then, moments before kickoff, half of the Faith fans and cheerleaders moved to the visitors' side of the stadium where they cheered -- by name -- for the stunned Gainesville State players, some encouraging kids they didn't even know to tackle their own sons. Remember Why You Play documents the lives, struggles, and triumphs of the players and coaches of Faith Christian School in Grapevine, Texas. Sports columnist and author David Thomas followed the team for a full season, recording a story that will inspire readers to understand that relationships are more important than winning. One of the key events was a game that Faith Christian played against the Gainesville State Tornadoes, a school for convicted juvenile offenders. He said if the book was not real in its presentation of how faith and football can work together as teammates, it would not be worth writing. I agreed. As it turns out, I wrote this book in part to explain how a game like the one played against Gainesville State in 2008 could come about.
