U S War Mongers Eyeing War with Iran. Illustration: John Ueland. At a congressional hearing examining the march to war in Iraq, Republican congressman Walter Jones posed a very simple question about the administration's manipulation of intelligence: "How could the professionals see what was happening and nobody speak out?" Colonel Lawrence Wilkerson, Colin Powell's former chief of staff, responded with an equally simple answer: "The vice president." But the blame for Iraq does not end with Cheney, Bush, or Rumsfeld. Nor is it limited to the intelligence operatives who sat silent as the administration cherry-picked its case for Detailed and documented description of the serial lying used by President George W. Bush seeking to justify the invasion of Iraq. Written by former federal agent Rodney Stich, this is one of several books written about the misconduct in government offices.
