Keep giving your customers more reasons to buy. Market locally. Give your customers something that appeals to them personally. Global brands are built out of so many strong local brands. Fish where the fish are. Concentrate your sales efforts on consumers who are willing and able to buy your product. Segment the market to help you identify your most profitable targets. It is significantly easier to increment behavior or broaden behavior than to teach or change behavior. Think S.O.B-Source of Business; where will your next sale and dollar of profit come from? Don't be blinded by visible demand. Preference is perishable. Keep selling the sold. Make sure everybody in your organization understands the strategy, the destination, and the business objectives. Then let them execute. Find the best available marketing professionals and create jobs around them. You've got to have the best people, not the best organization chart. Reward excellence and punish mediocrity. Strategy is your job. The job of your ad agencies is to communicate effectively. No single agency can satisfy all the needs of all of your brands. One size definitely doesn't fit all. Pay well so your agencies have the resources to attract good talent-but demand results that are measurable. Have a sense of urgency, and work with passion. Otherwise, what's the use of getting up in the morning? The end of marketing as we know it

Description:

It's the first day of Ramadan, and George is celebrating with his friend Kareem and his family. George helps Kareem with his first fast and joins in the evening celebration of tasting treats and enjoying a special meal. Then, George helps make gift baskets to donate to the needy, and watches for the crescent moon with the man in the yellow hat. Finally George joins in the Eid festivities to mark the end of his very first Ramadan.

This playful tabbed board book, with a foil-stamped cover, makes a great holiday gift for all fans of Curious George—those who celebrate Ramadan, and those who are learning about it for the first time!

It's Ramadan, Curious George, which will be published by Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, is the latest in a trend in children's publishing to appeal to a more diverse audience, including Muslims. Author Hena Khan told BuzzFeed that she hopes the Curious George book will help people to realize that "Muslim-Americans are a part of the very fabric of American society and are engaged at every level. We embrace our American identity along with our Muslim identity." While Curious George doesn't fast in the book, he does help his friend, Kareem, stay distracted by playing games.
