Blazing a path that many young rising stars of Scandinavian architecture have followed, Saarinen shot to fame by winning a number of architectural competitions while still in his twenties. Initially working with two classmates from school (receiving their first commission before graduating) and later on his own, Saarinen became the leading practitioner of a new national style fusing traditional Finnish building forms with Art Nouveau. Modern log technology provides excellent opportunities for creating architecture in the Scandinavian style. Minimalistic log house designs are always in. The cornerstones of Scandinavian-style architecture. The climate in the Nordic countries is varied, ranging from the cold and dark wintertime to the mildly warm summertime filled with light. The harsh conditions have led to simplicity of form and function, to clean lines and stylish practicality – all the while keeping comfort in mind. These ideals are achieved by the innovative use of natural materials. Scandinavian architecture means. Integration with nature. Simplicity in design. Utilisation of natural light. Creative use of natural materials. Functionality and comfort.

The quality of light in the higher latitudes has given rise to some of the most important and influential architecture of the modern period. In the Scandinavian countries, in particular, the ethereal nature of light combined with natural resources and highly refined building techniques, not to mention the stark seasonal contrast between the scarcity of light in winter and the ever-present glow of long summer days, have provided the context for architectural acts of genius. Lighting is a huge part of Scandinavian design, as the Nordic countries get so little of it naturally during the winter. As well as maximizing natural light at every opportunity – with white walls or large windows – lamps and lighting solutions are critical. Scandinavian design seeks to spread light as effectively as possible without creating a harsh atmosphere. Nuura has taken up the mantle spectacularly, with considered lighting that fits the modern Scandinavian home. It is functional, beautiful, and sculptural without being overwhelming. Their ability to innovate while working within their own aesthetic parameters makes for a thoroughly cohesive brand.
